Last Night's Result
Harriman, 11; Independents, 10

Manager Rocco Genco, of the Independents, has handed a written protest to Vice-president Thomas Juno, of the Bristol Twilight League, protesting the game played on St. Ann's field last night. Manager Genco claims that Umpire-in-Chief Joseph Riola did not call the batter out on an infield fly until after he (the batter) had reached first base, and that the umpire had also waved Cochrane (the base runner) away from second enabling him to be tagged out.

By T. M. Juno
In a very loose game played on St. Ann's field last night, the Harriman Field Club made its bow in the Bristol Twilight League by walking away with a one run decision from the Independents. Final score was 11-10.

The Harriman club after a very successful first inning in which ten runs were scored loosened up and gave a poor exhibition of baseball. Seven errors were chalked against the boys from the Sixth Ward and it looked as if the Independents would forge ahead in their last turn with the stick had not a double-play stopped them.

The Independents were behind from the beginning and fought a very game uphill battle and almost overcame the early lead of the winners. The "Indies" counted in every inning, scoring three in the first, two in the second, one in the third and fourth and winding up with three in their last bats.

Both teams collected nine safe blows. The Harriman club had four doubles in their share of safe hits while the Independents had two doubles and a home run. The four-base clout was hit by Piazza and was the first of the local season. The ball was lost in the tall grass in deep left and before it could be retrieved Piazza had circled the bases.

Neither of the starting hurlers, Crohe or Brooks were on the mound at the finish of the game. Crohe was out before two men were retired in the first inning. Tryon followed him and could not get a man out and so Jones came in and pitched wonderful relief ball. Brooks was battered from the peak in the last inning.

Every regular on both clubs with the exception of Juno, Massilia, of the Independents, crossed the plate at least once during the scoring melee. The "Indies" opened the game by counting three times in the first. Avella was thrown out by Wilkinson; (Continued on Page 6)

ADDED BAG OF GOLD IN COURIER'S $10,000 FREE GOLD GIFT CAMPAIGN STIRS CANDIDATES TO REAL ACTION

First Period Past History and End of Second Now in Sight

Announcement that The Courier has added to its already large list of prizes an extra bag of THREE HUNDRED DOLLARS in gold has been the means of stirring candidates to almost feverish activity, and nearly all real contenders for the other ten big bags of gold are preening their sights to add this extra prize to their trophies.

The added interest is gratifying to both the publishers and the campaign management; the campaign started so slowly, that for weeks there were more prizes than workers, and now the plan is working splendidly. True, there are one or two workers who declare they have reached the end of their string, and these are speedily dropping in the list to be replaced by more ardent workers, bent on success.

List Rapidly Growing
There are hundreds in this section who are not taking The Courier today! And there will be hundreds after the campaign ends June 6th. But it is a safe bet to say, because the present volume of subscriptions that are daily being added to our already large list, that The Courier will have a circulation that the city and its merchants can well be proud of.

The second period in the Courier's $10,000 Gold gift election is now on. During this short period, which terminates one week from Monday night, May 18, there will be a bonus vote of 30,000 for each year in new subscriptions. The second period is of vital importance to all who desire to win any of the attractive gifts soon to be awarded by the Courier. The vote credits during this short period are:

TIRED OF LIFE, SHE SAYS

BURLINGTON, N. J., May 15.—Quick action on the part of Frank Trolene, of Federal street, prevented the suicide yesterday afternoon of Mary Forker, 22, of 222 High street. The young woman was walking along High street with Trolene when she suddenly declared that she was tired of life and placed a number of poison tablets in her mouth.

Trolene seized the girl's neck and choked her so that several of the tablets fell out of her mouth. He then rushed her to the emergency hospital where she was treated by Dr. Edward Mallow. Whether she had swallowed any of the poison or not could not be determined. After giving her antidotes the doctor sent her to the Burlington County Hospital at Mount Holly for observation.

the same for all. Who knows who may come to the front this important week and secure the winning votes over the more confident ones, who may feel that they have the winning votes now. Overconfidence is a candidate's greatest handicap. It has lost more races than it ever won.

The first period, which ended last Monday night was a grand success for the many candidates and so general was the turn-in that hundreds of new subscribers were added for the paper itself. Fine totals were recorded for practically every candidate in the list, a tighter race than ever is promised for the leadership in the three districts this week.

The campaign department was busy until today totaling the returns and a complete record of standings are published below. So numerous were the returns Monday that it was impossible to have the totals ready for publication before today.

JAMES H. BIRCH, JR., DIES AFTER STROKE

Burlington Banker and Editor
Succumbs in New York
Hotel

A PROMINENT CITIZEN

BURLINGTON, N. J., May 15.—James H. Birch, Jr., 58 years old, prominent banker and editor, of 415 High street, Burlington, died yesterday in the Hotel Governor Clinton, New York, after an illness of a few days. Death was due to a stroke of paralysis. He went to New York about a week ago.

Mr. Birch suffered a similar stroke a few years ago, but had recovered. In November, 1926, he figured in an automobile accident near Columbus, N. J., in which he was seriously injured and lost the sight of one eye. He never fully regained his health. Harry Shedaker, who was with him in the automobile, was instantly killed.

Mr. Birch, one of the leading citizens of Burlington County, was president of the Mechanics National Bank, of Burlington. He was the son of the late James H. Birch, veteran carriage manufacturer of Burlington, and was born and raised here.

Some years ago he was sent by his father as a sales agent to make a trip around the world in the interest of the Birch products. Birch carriages found a market in all parts of the globe as a result of the trip. The trip entitled the younger Birch to become a member of the Circumnavigator Club and he became editor of the "Log," published by the club.

The deceased was a brother to the late Colonel Thomas H. Birch, former United States minister to Portugal under President Wilson's administration. Like his father and brother he was a staunch Democrat, but never sought office. He was twice married. (Continued on Page 4)

WILLIAM GENTRY RE-ELECTED HEAD OF DISTRICT ASS'N

Sunday Schools of Fifth District Conduct Session Here

DR. BREWSTER SPEAKS

Over 200 Delegates Enjoy Session at Zion Lutheran Church

Well over 200 delegates met last evening at the Zion Lutheran Church for the annual convention of the Fifth District of the Bucks County Sabbath School Association.

Over 20 Sunday Schools had representatives present, the largest single delegation being from the Grace Methodist Church, Morrisville, with 58 representatives.

Rev. Paul Ronge, pastor of the Zion Lutheran Church, opened the meeting with a few words of greeting, and with scripture and song. Prayer was offered by Rev. S. B. Knowlton, and an anthem was sung by the Zion Lutheran Church choir.

William Gentry, president of the Association, then called for the report of the nominating committee for officers for the next year, and the following officers were nominated and elected: President, William Gentry, of Morrisville; vice-president, George Taylor, of Bristol; secretary, Mrs. T. B. Fowler, of Morrisville; treasurer, J. J. Hargrave, of Bristol. The election of the heads of the various departments of the Sabbath School work was left until a later date.

After the election of officers an address was made to the delegates by Dr. E. H. Brewster, head of the Board of Education of the Philadelphia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. After summarizing the history of the Sunday School and showing its importance as a forerunner of popular education, Dr. Brewster launched into his topic, "Present Ideals in Sunday School Work." The present ideals, he said, are the outgrowth of the trend of history; and two great ideals are responsible for the changes in Sunday School work and methods. The first of these ideals comes from the discovery that people have different personalities corresponding with the different stages of growth. The graded lessons are an attempt to meet the differing needs of differing ages and avoid character fixation, which is a great danger. The ideal of the Sunday School is for continuous evangelism of the growing personality.

The second great ideal of the present Sunday School work, says Dr. Brewster, rises from the fact that we have come to know how people learn, which has brought about a great change in the method of teaching. We learn not by hearing or by memorizing. (Continued on Page 4)

TELLS JURY DEFENDANT GAVE HIM MONEY OBTAINED FROM "STICK-UP" IN WHICH "SOMEBODY WAS BUMPED OFF"

At First "Bozo" Meyers Displays Reluctance to Talk Until Assured No Criminal Charges Will Be Pressed Against Him — Snipes' Sweetheart Bursts Into Tears at Plea for Death Sentence.

EXPECT NIGHT SESSION OF COURT TO SPEED CASE

DOYLESTOWN, May 15. — The fate of William C. Snipes, of Philadelphia, charged with the slaying of Edward Gamils, proprietor of the Blue Spruce Inn at Trevoise, rested to a large extent today on the testimony of Carl ("Bozo") Meyers, a former school-mate and one-time chum of Snipes.

Carl ("Bozo") Meyers, 22 years old, of Lancaster, S. C., star witness for the Commonwealth in the murder trial of his boyhood chum, William C. Snipes, also of Lancaster, took the witness stand in Bucks County Criminal Court yesterday and told of the alleged murderer's activities as a gunman.

Displaying a reluctance to talk until assured by counsel that no criminal charges would be pressed against him, Meyers, in jail since February 15 as a material witness, finally "opened up" and spoke freely. He told how Snipes on the morning of February 14 handed him $230 in cash in a Philadelphia restaurant and had admitted to him that it was money from a "stick-up" in which "somebody was bumped off."

Preceding Meyers on the stand, Miss Marguerite E. Tryon, private secretary in the Bucks County District Attorney's office, read a number of alleged confessions made by Snipes when questioned by Assistant District Attorney J. Leslie Killoynne the day after the murder. The statements as read by the witness disclosed Snipes as having frequently repeated: "I don't know, I was drunk." The statement further accuses him of confessing that "all I know is that I shot that fellow. I don't know who it was. . . . We started out on the night of the 13th. Two other fellows picked me up. I don't know where I went to. . . . I had a gun with me. . . . This is the gun I used to shoot that man with."

Meyers attended school with Snipes in Lancaster, S. C., from whence the latter came to Philadelphia some time ago. About a year ago Meyers married a sister of Marion Ellis, 19, who is to go on trial with John Tagg, Jr., 20, next month for the alleged part they played in the hold up that led to Gamils' death.

Throughout the day Miss Catherine A. Lynch, 22 years old, of 3020 Frankford Avenue, Philadelphia, who professes to love Snipes, sat in the crowded little courtroom with tears streaming from her eyes. She stifled a cry when District Attorney Eastburn, in his opening remarks demanded that the defendant be sentenced to death.

Miss Lynch, four brothers and a sister of Snipes, were visibly shaken when Mrs. Cecelia Gamils identified the defendant as the slayer of her husband, Helen Mekonik, a waitress at the inn, who followed Mrs. Gamils on the stand, described the shooting.

Meyers, a brother-in-law of Marion Ellis, also of Lancaster, one of three indicted for the murder of Gamils, was the last one to take the stand today. He will undergo cross-examination when it is expected, the State will finish its case. Ellis and John Tagg, Jr., of South Langhorne, Snipes' alleged accomplices, will face trial late this month.

Meyers testified that he, Snipes, Ellis and Tagg, who had together rented an apartment on Chestnut Street, West Philadelphia, motored to Norristown on the night of Friday, February 13. He declared he left his companions there and returned to Philadelphia by train.

At about 2:30 a. m., he said, he was awakened as his room-mates returned and started drinking. Later in the morning, he said, Snipes asked him to take care of the $230, saying he was going on a "wild party." The same day, he went on, Snipes rented an (Continued on Page 6)

BOY SCOUTS

Scouthood has just come of age, but he is a strapping youngster for twenty-one. The Boy Scouts of America have a present membership of 864,341, an increase of 3.8 per cent over that of a year ago.

Since the beginning of this great movement among the youth of the United States there have been 5,242,815 boys who have taken the Scout pledge. This means that during the years in which the movement has been growing to maturity one boy in every six between the ages of 12 and 17 has been registered as a Scout.

Vast as this membership is, it should be larger. It should be made virtually impossible for any American boy to pass through the period of eligibility without becoming a Scout. Instead of 864,341 Scouts there should be nearly five million of them, and augmenting the latter figure should be hundreds of thousands of "cubs," "lone scouts," and scout leaders and executives who have come from the ranks.

For the reason that "the author of this organization has done more to vitalize the methods of character training than all the school men in this country since the Pilgrims landed on the New England coast," the scout movement is gaining in size and usefulness. It can progress no faster than it can develop able leaders.

IF 35 WERE THE LIFE SPAN

One of the best known modern philosophers and authors takes the startling position that most men ought to die at 35. At 40, he claims, men are but a reminiscence, that at 35 the average man is at the height of his life curve and should be put out of the way at that zenith. That he lacks the courage of his convictions is apparent from the fact that he is now 44 years old and still looks both ways at street crossings. And he has produced his greatest literary works in the past five years.

The suggestion has aroused indignant protest from men and women in all walks of life and of all ages above 35. These point out that most of the great achievements in history were consummated by men past the two score mark. And great men of history have been highly productive even to the age of 80.

To the average man it appears that the philosopher has overlooked one important consideration. Even should it be granted that most men are at the height of their curve at 35, which probably of itself is untrue, it does not follow that other important work may not be accomplished while the curve is receding. Would the world be better off without such accomplishment, even though it were not quite up to that which was effected at 35?

The theory that there is no place in the industrial scheme for men past the so-called prime of life is rapidly losing ground. While it cannot be denied that the enthusiasm of youth is a valuable asset, it is equally true that with age comes experience, and experience is indispensable. Society would be distinctly the loser if such men as Edison, Ford, the elder Morgan, Rockefeller and Gary had been taken out of production at the age of 35.

Some wives use a quick-working poison and some fry everything.

Guilty Conscience.

"Poor old Babs," chuckled Talbot. "She has the shakes. Too much exercise, I guess, and the strain of dressing for dinner with out two or three maids to hand her things."

"It isn't that," said Sally, not unkindly. "Those terrible houses at Cathay are enough to upset her. They gave me the creeps, too. Oh, Talbot, I wish you could have seen this place before the boom ended. It was lovely. I didn't hate it then. It was the most beautiful place in the world."

"All it needs," said Talbot, slowly, "are a few decent people around and a few houses that are living instead of dead. There's a fascination about it that even I can feel, and I'll confess that I'm one of those birds who take pretty kindly to luxury and civilization. A little money would take most of the rough edges off this country. Open up and repair some of those houses at Cathay, get a few cars running loose around the road and you'd have a different country here."

Barbara appeared at the screen door.

"Did I hear Gerry's car?" she demanded tensely.

"Not yet," said Sally, wondering at the girl's ill-concealed nervousness.

Barbara scratched a match against the screen. The fragile black enamel under the pressure impatiently she opened the door and threw the unlighted cigarette out on to the lawn. She turned back into the house.

(To Be Continued Tomorrow)

Dave Ordway finds love and adventure when his plane crashes in the orange groves owned by beautiful Joan Marbury. He loves Joan but her reserve is impenetrable. Her cousin, Sally, however, is obviously in love with Dave. Gerry Flemming, Talbot Henderson and Barbara Holworthy, Dave's former fiancée, visit him. Barbara is hostile toward the girls. Under cover of darkness, Dave leaves, with Gerry and Talbot, to even a score against Mueller, neighboring plantation owner, who, in reality, is Snatch Cazzoni, a bootlegger. Mueller tried to force his attentions upon Joan and also robbed Dave and destroyed his plane. Planning to steal Mueller's plane to replace Dave's, the boys come upon a banger containing four planes, and also discover a liquor-cutting plant. Figures loom in the darkness. Dave grapples with the nearest one. It is Joan. Unable to resist, they kiss. Heedless of danger, the girls had followed but are ordered back. On the way, Barbara, in revenge, pretends to hear Dave calling Joan. Joan goes back in search of him accompanied only by her colored mammy. Mueller finds them.

CHAPTER XXVI.

"WELL, hello, sweetie!" Joan's blood chilled at the sound of Mueller's voice. A hand appeared in the searing light, seized her wrist and dragged her from the closet.

"Where's your swell boy friends now?" he mocked.

The searchlight swivelled away. The gunman who had been standing beside his chief stepped aside. Joan could now see Mueller's swarthy face. There were glistening drops of sweat on his forehead and on his upper lip. His mouth was drawn back into a tight-lipped grin. His beady eyes squinted down into hers.

"They left you alone with the old nigger while they went on the lam, yeah?" he gloated, the way with them dudes. "That's arm crawled around her wrist, drew her close to his chest. She pushed against him but his muscles were like steel. She kicked at his legs, but he only laughed.

Generous Offer.

"What's the idea, sweetie?" he panted. "You're going to be nice to me and I'm going to make it up to you, see? You can have anything you want. I'm rich, see?"

"If you don't let me alone," Joan gasped. "Mr. Ordway will come and kill you!"

"Oh, so you're sweet on that punk, yeah?" he scoffed. "He can't even hold that green-eyed broad, he can't. She give him the air, didn't she? And didn't you see the come-on look she give me in your dining room? Don't waste your time on a guy like that baby. You and me'll get along fine."

There was a queer scrambling sound from the darkness of the floor. Hannah, plunging forward on her hands and knees, threw herself at Mueller's legs with a cry that was more animal-like than human. He staggered and cursed.

"Get away from me, you black hellcat!" he yelled. "That's Hannah's ponderous arms rose and encircled his body. She began to pull herself to her feet, using his writhing torso for leverage to haul her tremendous weight upright. Mueller hammered down at her face with his clenched fist, screaming obscenities at her. "You enta gwine hurt mah baby!" Hannah panted, still clawing her way to her feet. The other gunman leaped at her, grabbing a handful of her black hair and trying to jerk her away from Mueller. Joan, who had raced toward the door, stopped abruptly, turned, and was at the two men like a silent fury. She placed her two hands around the guard's face and clawed with her fingernails, trying to reach his eyes.

Hannah fell heavily. The guard, twisting away from Joan's tearing hands, spun around on his heel, stepped forward and kicked Hannah in the stomach. Mueller grasped Joan's wrists and held them helpless. The guard kicked Hannah again. The negroess screamed, pushed herself to her feet and stumbled out of the room at a weird half-trot, waving her black fists wildly about her head. Mueller swung Joan around to face him.

"Come on, you little spit-fire," he panted, "you'll be going with me, now."

Futile Resistance.

"I won't go with you," Joan sobbed. "Mr. Ordway is coming and he'll tear you into little pieces." "Oh, yeah?" he sneered. "Well, let him come. I been aching to bounce him off ever since I first seen him. But you're going along with me, baby. By the time I get through with you, you'll listen to reason, see? And if your dude friend is coming, he'll have to be coming pronto, see, because you and me are going to go where he can't sic the bulls on us. We're going to take a nice little plane ride."

He stooped swiftly. His arms went around her waist. She clawed at him with her hands, but he pressed his sweaty face into her shoulder, protecting it from her sharp nails.

"Flash that light on the stairs, Pete," he grunted. "When we get outside you lam ahead and tell Sime to crank up the amphibian and be ready to get away in a heck of a hurry."

The lamp-lit hospitality of the old plantation house beckoned genially to Talbot, Sally and Barbara as they left the Ford beside the road and walked slowly across the lawn.

"I don't blame you at all for loving this place, Miss Sally," said Talbot, gazing from the windows. "After coming back from those abandoned houses, this seems like a haven of refuge."

"But I don't love it," declared Sally, vehemently. "I hate it, every bit of it. I wish it would burn down. I wish I could never see it again in all my life!"

Talbot looked at her thoughtfully, then at Barbara. But Barbara's face was averted. If she had been listening, she made no sign.

"You've been under a strain, Sally," Talbot said gently. "Everything will be all right now. When we know that Dave has made a getaway in one of the planes, we'll all drive over to St. Petersburg and take a little cruise while the police get to work making a Christian out of Mueller. They'll drive him out of the State."

His first wife was Miss Marguerite Thomason, of Burlington, but after a few years the couple were divorced. She then became Countess Von Bernstorff, and still later came into international prominence in a divorce action in Germany. Birch later married Miss Amanda Lumis, of New York, who survives him. He also leaves a sister, Mrs. Segilman Myers, of New York. No arrangements have yet been made for the funeral.

ing, but by activity touched with meaning.

These new ideals have led directly to great changes in Sunday School curriculum, in methods of teaching, guidance taking the place of coercion, and in a broader interpretation of the objective of the Sunday School.

Dr. Brewster illustrated his points with illustrations drawn from the Sunday School lessons and often drew appreciative smiles from his audience by his representations of the teachers' mistaken methods. He closed his address with an appeal to the delegates to remember their responsibility and to make the Sunday Schools a place where a spiritual valuation is placed on all of life.

Resident of Bristol Gets Term in Jail

"What are you trying to do, block up the highway?"

"The next thing I knew both of the men were standing on either side of me and 'hauled off' at my jaws. I fell into the gutter and after making several attempts to get up went to the home of a stranger, who took me to the Bristol police station, where the chief fireman, McGee, took me to the Harriman Hospital for treatment."

When the defense counsel asked

Rickets whether he was sure of the identity of Parvese, Rickets said: "I saw him in a neighborhood poolroom several times and I was able to recognize his voice as the man who spoke to me on the street." He also stated that Parvese never wore a hat and that he had no hat on the night of the assault. He then testified how he was bandaged at the Harriman Hospital and later went to Camden, where he was admitted to the Cooper Hospital, and was a patient for eight days.

Mrs. Lennie Rickets testified she was spending the night in Riverside, when her daughter, Lillian, called her up and told her that Willard was hurt. She went along to have him admitted to the Cooper Hospital. She concluded her testimony by telling of the extent of her son's injuries and the treatment which he still underwent on account of the attack.

Members of the jury were: William R. Thomas, Quakertown; Mary Gleason, Bristol; Harvey D. Gabel, Perkasie, R. D.; Horace R. Fesmire, Warminster; Gertrude D. Callen, Morrisville; Oliver J. Leatherman, Doylestown; Warren Bryan, Doylestown; John Simons, New Hope; Charles E. Parker, Bristol; Harold O. Leatherman, Plumsteadville; Arthur R. Clayton, Feasterville; Harry L. Seifert, Springtown.

Samuel Parvese twenty-five, 343 Penn street, Bristol said: "About 10 o'clock that night Rich and I were walking along Penn street and when we arrived at the corner of Penn and Wood streets we stopped and talked to Mrs. Winno. As the result of her conversation we went to the police station."

Parvese denied seeing Rickets, pass by or striking him and explained they went to the police station to look for Mrs. Winno's son.

Frank Denny, 616 Wood street, Bristol, testified that he saw Rickets and Chief Jones peer into the car in which he and Parvese were sitting.

Dr. George F. Fox of the Harriman Hospital, testified that he gave first aid to Rickets for a fracture of both jaws and advised him to go to the fine of $25 and costs, serve three months in prison, and placed on probation for three years with Chief Jones as his probation officer.

Parvese was convicted on both charges. He was sentenced to pay a

Of course...you can get along without Twin Ignition

...but you don't get along so well

You could, if necessary, see with one eye. You can drive with one hand. Two make a better job of it.

The same applies to Twin Ignition. People who drive the Nash Twin Ignition Eight-80 or Eight-90 (16 spark plugs, 16 firing points, instead of 8) have a distinct advantage over cars still using single ignition. The gasoline mixture is burned more quickly and more completely.

By engineering test, the same motor with Twin Ignition instead of single ignition, produces 22% more power, 5 more miles per hour top speed and 2 extra miles of travel from a gallon of gasoline.

Of course, you can get along without Twin Ignition. But we say, and these cars will prove it, that you don't get along so well!

Just compare the pep, power, smoothness and gasoline consumption of the Nash Eight-80 or Eight-90 with cars of the single ignition type at the same price, and you'll agree with us, and with Nash owners, that here is a most desirable improvement.

Buy no car today until you have made this interesting comparison. We will gladly arrange a demonstration. Just phone...we'll send a car.

other room on Woodland Avenue, and he helped him remove his belongings, including two pistols which the police found when they went there looking for the slayer.

Under cross-examination, Miss Tryon steadfastly denied that she saw blood or black and blue marks on Snipes' face during a grilling by county authorities. The defense, it is believed, will attempt to establish that the police resorted to brutality in order to extract a statement from Snipes.

A night session of the Bucks County Court is expected to be called by Judge Calvin S. Boyer in the hope that the trial will be brought to a close today. Defense attorneys plan to present their case immediately after the case of the Commonwealth is closed this afternoon. Defense attorneys are expected to cross-examine Myers, who yesterday gave damaging testimony against Snipes.

Girl Acrobats Delight
Large Audience Here

Twenty girls and one young man, pupils of Professor William J. Herrmann, of Herrmann's Physical Training Institute, Philadelphia, kept an audience of 400 men and women continually applauding, last night as they performed at the high school "gym."

It was the monthly meeting of the Fathers' Association but the women were invited to attend and witness the performance. There was an exceptionally large attendance and the audience sat in the form of a hollow square, the center of which was used as the stage for the performers.

There were acrobatic, singing and dancing numbers which delighted those present. The girls ranged in age from five years to young womanhood. The audience was so enraptured with the acts and the participants that the applause was continuous and as the little tots completed their numbers without a hitch, someone would reach out from the sidelines and hug them.

"This is the greatest program Stan Runyan ever put on for us," was a frequent comment as the men left the auditorium.

Professor Herrmann and his pupils came to Bristol in a large bus. The professor was warmly congratulated upon the character of entertainment given.

A sagging Arch
Means the end of BEAUTY

Arch Preserver shoes were not named by lucky accident. The smart new Selby Arch Preservers we are now showing were designed for the woman of fashion who realizes the vital importance of preserving the arch.

The sagging arch means the end of beauty. It means lines of tiredness and age on your face. It means an awkward walk that destroys the beauty of everything you wear.

These famous Selby shoes had to be called Arch Preservers. They were designed to preserve your arch. Your youthfulness, your gracefulness, your smartness, too.

See them today. Most styles from $8.50 to $12.50.

It's this sagging that gradually breaks down your arches. The patented supporting construction, exclusive with Arch Preserver Shoes, prevents this, absolutely.
